Student's Corner

The present research examines the surrender of Naxalites in Odisha, a state that has become a significant focus in the Red Corridor due to the ongoing Naxal war in India. It focuses on the fate of those who surrendered before the state, examining the motivations behind their involvement in Ultra Leftist Insurgency and their post-surrender life. This study also examines the implementation of the Surrender cum Rehabilitation Policy and its impact on the lives of those who have surrendered as Naxals. It uses the Reference Group theoretical framework to examine their experiences. Moreover it offers recommendations from various stakeholders, including government personnel, surrendered Naxals, and researchers from the field.
